

Len and Diane Kjos wind down in their country home by reading after a long day in their store and for Len, also doing service calls on the road in the western part of the sprawling municipal district. Len, who is also an M.D. 52 councillor, periodically glances up to check the television that is rumbling in the background while his wife looks over a copy of The Provost News. At 11:05 p.m. we thought that all the picture taking was wrapped up for the day. But returning to town later that night something caught the corner of the photographer's eye . . .

It's a sparkler that lights up a group of teenagers' fun on a deserted Main Street in Provost at 15 minutes before midnight. Colby Bishop, 17 holds the stick while friends (not seen in the picture) Mark Grocock 18, A. J. Bertoia, 17 all of town—and 18 year old Pascale Weber of Switzerland smile with satisfaction. The day is over. ©PROVOST NEWS PHOTOS.
